During the month of October 2009, I read an article about a woman photographer and her attempt to do a self assigned artistic and creative project. The project was simple, do a self-portrait each day for a year. To maximize artistic creativity, the self imposed requirements were simple, the portrait did not have to include her face. Anything that would reflect who she was or described something about her was sufficient. Face, hand, fingers, any part of her body, reflection, symbolic items, items important to her, just about anything which helped define who she was would work for the project. Unfortunately, she ran out of creative ideas between the third and fourth months. I was inspired by the article and so I decided to take up the challenge. This book is the result of my attempt to meet the challenge.

This book is about definitions. Who I am, what I did, how I spent the days of 2010, or what I experienced during 2010. As with most people, I have experienced happy times, sad times, reflective times, fun times; a full rainbow of experiences. My photographs are certainly a look at what was important to me, what affected me, what was artist to me, what made me think and wonder, what made me laugh or smile, and who was part of my life during 2010.

If you know me, you know I love humor. So this book has its share of humor. I am also a thinker, so there is much to think about as well.

For this project, I primarily used a Canon IS 1200. Easy to use, easy to carry, lots of features. The Canon is not detailed as my other cameras, but the Canon is versatile and works well. Since this is a self portrait book, it is only fair the camera did a self portrait as well (see below). A tripod, a mirror, and a self timer was all that was needed. (Reverse reflection photograph).

Thanks to all my friends, family, and kind strangers which exercised patience with me and participated on this project.

I have spent many years taking photographs of others. This is the first time, the "focus" has been on me.

Enjoy this book, excuse its short falls and remember: The best reward is your smile.

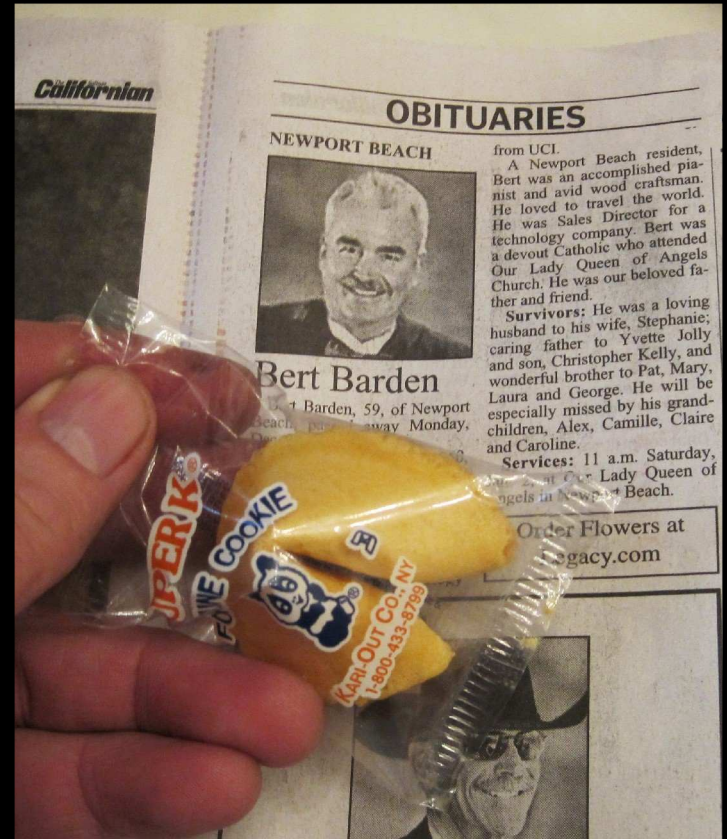

January

The year begins. Jeanne and I decided to go out for lunch at a chinese restaurant to bring in the new year. I never eat the fortune cookie, I don't really like them. But the fortune is usually fun to read. I couldn't think of a better way to start my year long project. Read my fortune. Maybe the fortune would give me a hint on how my year would go.

I decided to wait until I got home to read my fortune. But sometimes, reality superseeds a fortune cookie message. I opened the paper and as I was reading the paper, I came across the obituaries. In the obituaries, I saw the listing of someone I went to school with. Bert, alas, poor Bert. He won't have the opportunity to see 2010. If I am fortunate to see the end of 2010, this book will then be in memory of Bert. Life is short, no one is perfect. Each day is a gift. Cherish each day as a gift. So for the year 2010, I will celebrate the year as a gift.

This book is what I experienced this year. I am sure some days will be fantastic, some days will be at the opposite end of the spectrum. However it will be, whatever it is... It is my journey.

Come along with me, live my 2010 with me. But most important, enjoy.

February 22, 2010. Sixty years ago at 12:24 AM on a Winter night in Davenport, Iowa, a child was born. His was named Richard Gwain Stutt.

Today..... Doesn't look his age, but feels his age. Slowed down a bit, but his mind is still very active. Couldn't guess it, but he was shy, not now. He was mellow as a baby, and he is mellow now like wine. Getting close to retirement, but looking forward to as much life as he can to enjoy. He has done a lot, but he has lots of things left to do.

So it's my birthday. The big "6 = 0."

Thank you,
Old Friend.

Before "Facing 2010 - A Self Portrait Journey,"

Camera condition: near new.

At the end of "Facing 2010 - A Self Portrait Journey."

Over 365 days, countless photographs, thousands of miles, 13 countries, three States, by car, by bus, by jet, by train, by ship, by foot, dropped, tossed, lost, found; this camera has taken a beating. But it keeps on working. Without it, my project would only be a thought, a dream.

Camera condition: scratches, dings, worn surfaces, still working.

Thank you old friend.
